Russians Advancing in East Prussia; Germans Mass for Fight in Silesia

In the map are shown the line which was held by the Germans on October 18, at the time of their furthest advance into Russia, the present line of the Russian forces extending from East Prussia through Russian Poland, along the Silesian border and across Galicia to the Carpathian Mountains, and the present position of the Austrians after their retreat from the Vistula.

A report from Petrograd says that the Russians have occupied all of Galicia as far as Turka (1) and that their army, now free from the possibility of an attack from the rear, has begun a new assault upon Przemysl (2). The Russians' advance has carried them beyond the lower course of the Wisloka River and past Rzeszow (3). The Russian cavairy has been reported at Tarnow (4) and one report is that the advance guard of the Russian army has already reached the outer defences of Cracow (5). The frontier of Silesia is said to be seriously exposed to the Russian attack and it is believed that an invasion is aimed at the line between Breslau and Cracow. The Russians, according to last report, are within less than forty miles from Koenigshuette (6) and are advancing directly on that city.

"The Germans, instead of helping the Austrians to prolong the resistance in Galloia and to protect their own approaches to Silesia, risked the remnants of their ally's forces in the Warsaw campaign and so destroyed whatever hope the Austrians may have had of recovering lost ground or even of effectively defending the still unconquered area in Galloia.

"At the same time the Germans greatly weakened their defensive force for the total German and Austrian losses during the brief Polish campaign probably amount to 100,000, and have cleared the ground for the Russian advance."

Russians Reported Respectively Twenty and Forty Miles.

London, Nov. 12.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Morning Post finds evidences that the Russians are preparing along a wide front to advance into Germany. There is a considerable extent of German territory to regain before the whole front will be in line to advance. Interesting technical problems, with plenty of fighting, may be looked for in the near future in East Prussia in the direction of Mlawa and Soldau.

Good progress is being made, this correspondent says, in the pursuit of the Austrians who are retreating on Cracow. On the north the Russians are twenty miles from the city. On the east they are forty miles distant.
